Summary

I am a PhD candidate at the Annenberg School for Communication, University of Pennsylvania. My research explores the visual representation of social identity in Latin American political communication using computer vision and NLP techniques. My dissertation project leverages Urban Visual Data to study how out-of-home political advertisements influence electoral outcomes in Mexican elections.

DragonLab Consultants – Mexico City, Mexico

2021 – 2022

Researcher

- Participated in the research consulting project titled "Analysis of Court Rulings with Gender Perspective".
- Analyzed and coded the content of 342 court rulings to determine if Mexican judges use gender perspective adequately.
- Performed the statistical exploration of the data sets obtained from said content analysis.
- Synthesized the results from the content analysis into a report that Mexico's Judiciary will use to evaluate the nation's Protocol to Judge with Gender Perspective.

Facultad Latinoamericana de Ciencias Sociales (FLACSO) – Mexico City, Mexico

2018 – 2022

Research assistant

- Analyzed data and designed visualizations for a research project about the gap between political and economic globalization.
- Coordinated a research consulting project to identify the strengths and weaknesses of the evaluation system of information transparency for the National Institute of Access to Information and Personal Data Protection.
- Developed an academic program and created didactic content for the National School for Women of the Institutional Revolutionary Party. This organization seeks to empower the party's female members by educating them about gender perspective, political representation, and communication strategies.
- Created educational content for the Migrant-e project (lead by the Universidad Nacional Autónoma de México). This initiative seeks to teach undocumented immigrants living in the United States about their rights and the available tools for improving their safety.
